Trade federation raises concerns over 'workplaces turning into virus hotspots'

The General Federation of Jordanian Trade Unions warned against workplaces and offices becoming coronavirus "hotspots", especially after the Kingdom saw a record number of 634 cases on Tuesday. The General Federation stressed in a statement that preventing further escalation "requires intensifying the attention given to occupational health and safety measures within the work environment in all economic facilities, by workers and employers alike, as the Kingdom was reaching the 'red' level of the government's plan to deal with the virus". General Federation President Mazen Maaytah said on Wednesday that the "great jump in the number of cases recorded in this unprecedented manner requires commitment to the utmost caution by workers in various sectors to preserve both their safety and the continuation of the production process".
