Jordan to announce first round of solar energy beneficiaries in April

The Ministry of Energy and Mineral Resources said it will announce in April the first batch of beneficiaries for their solar energy system programme. A total of 2,495 families nationwide have applied to benefit from the installation programme, according to a ministry statement. Energy Minister Hala Zawati said that the ministry, since the government announced the initiative to install 2-kilowatt solar energy systems in March of 2018, has received 2,495 applications from families who benefit from the National Aid Fund, noting that the ministry is still accepting applications on its website.

Gov't reaches out to Northern Mazar jobseekers, promises plans to resolve unemployment

A government team, including Civil Service Bureau (CSB) President Nidal Batayneh, Secretary General of the Ministry of Labour Ziad Obeidat and representatives of other ministries met with citizens in Irbid's Northern Mazar District on Sunday. Batayneh introduced the general framework of the national employment plan, while the committees of the Jordan Armed Forces-Arab Army (JAF) and security services received the applications of the Northern Mazar's citizens who wish to join the JAF and other security agencies, the Jordan News Agency, Petra, reported. Batayneh said the meeting was part of a national effort, under the direct directives of His Majesty King Abdullah, adding that short and medium-term plans are being prepared to create jobs. "These efforts are all part of the King's directives and government's endeavour to improve the economy and the living standards of citizens, as well as to promote investments,"
